The internal development of Chinese society, culture, politics, and economy are questions that are of sharply increased interest and relevance to the entire global community. The deepening of Chinese international involvement, and its emergence as a global power, has also sharpened academic interest in the future course of China.

In response to this enhanced interest, the China Institute of the University of Alberta will host a Worldwide Universities Network (WUN) Contemporary China Conference - "China 2020" July 8-9, 2010 on the campus of the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

China scholars, principally but not exclusively from the WUN network, will present papers examining possible vectors of change within China and in its external linkages over the course of the next decade, with the goal of illuminating the near future of that great Asian state and its institutions.
