Sexuality is a central aspect of being human and, yet, it is often a significant cause of confusion and distress when expressed in care facilities. This presentation will provide an overview of sexuality among adults across the lifespan and the barriers to sexual expression in these facilities. It will then explore common challenges and provide guidance for decision-making in complex ethical scenarios, particularly involving residents with impaired capacity. Finally, opportunities to better support residents, health care providers, and family members around matters of sexual expression will be considered.
