Calculation should be based on the last 2 years. To ensure consistency, please follow these guidelines:

- If you are a new grad student (0 or < 1 year), your GPA for the last two years would be your admission GPA for graduate studies.

- If you have been in your current graduate program for one year, take the average of your overall GPA from the past year of grad studies and your admission GPA, weighted equally.

- If you have been in your current grad program for more than 2 years, use the GPA from the two most recent years in which you took any courses. For example, if you are in year 3 but you took all your courses in years 1 and 2 of your degree, take the GPA from those two years.
