

INVITED PANELIST

Dr Donald Buie obtained his MD and MSc in Experimental Surgery from the University of Alberta. After a rotating internship in Vancouver, he completed a residency in general surgery at the University of Alberta followed by a teaching fellowship at the University of Alberta and a two-year fellowship in colorectal surgery at the University of Minnesota. He returned to the University of Calgary where he joined the staff at the Foothills Hospital with a practice limited to colon and rectal surgery. Dr. Buie is Chief of Surgery at the Foothills Hospital in Calgary and Program Director for Colon and Rectal Surgery. He has served the Royal College as the Examination Chair for General Surgery and as a member of the examination board for Colon and Rectal Surgery. He was a board member of the American Board of Colon and Rectal Surgery (2010-2016), President from 2016-17, and is presently a senior examiner. He was a co-editor for Diseases of the Colon and Rectum from 2009-16 and was chair of the Practice Guidelines Committee for the ASCRS (2008-14) spearheading the transition to the GRADE methodology. He was a co-PI for an Alberta Health Services grant to standardize rectal cancer care in the province of Alberta through a multidisciplinary clinical care pathway. Present research interests include rectal cancer outcomes, management of diverticular disease and surgical management of IBD.
